

Leading Designers of South Bay AD100

Growing up with a civil engineer mother and a carpenter father, Milana Bahbout believes that she was destined to be a designer.

As a child, she traveled the world as a competitive tennis player and found art to be her escape.

“My lifelong passion for design and innate strength for problem solving have allowed me to create some of the South Bay’s most unique spaces,” she says.

She’s spent the last decade working with top architects, builders, and suppliers - forming relationships that create a seamless experience for her clients.

“I bring a multicultural perspective into my clients’ spaces and ensure that every project tells the story of their character,” she says. “I might bring antiques into a modern space or other special pieces to achieve balance and timeless design. My greatest satisfaction comes from ongoing relationships with clients and being invited to help with all of their projects over time.”

For Milana, learning her clients’ aesthetics and personalities is key to her success.

When meeting with clients, she spends time observing and listening to identify their unique style.

Using this, along with her creativity and expertise, she always transforms their vision for their home into reality - their one-of-a-kind oasis.
